SACRED CANTATA

To be Given by Community Chorus, Palm Sunday and Easter

At last we have a "Community Chorus" in Bedford. More than fifty of the most talented singers, from all the churches in Bedford, have been working for weeks, under the direction of Prof. S. H. Koontz, preparing to render the wonderful, sacred cantata by Theodore Dubois, entitled "The Seven Last Words of Christ". There are many beautiful solo parts and these will be sung by Miss Bess Corle and Louise Silver Burke as soprano soloists; by Mr. J. C. Doty as tenor soloist and by Mr. Fred S. Sammel as baritone soloist. Never before, in the history of Bedford, have so many people united to render a sacred cantata, and it would be difficult to find a more beautiful cantata than "The Seven Last Words of Christ". Therefore the music lovers of Bedford have a treat in store for them on Palm Sunday evening at eight o'clock when the cantata will be sung in St. John's Reformed Church and again on Easter evening at 8 o'clock when it will be sung in the Methodist Episcopal Church. A library silver offering is requested. Out of this the expenses for music, etc. will be met and the balance will be divided equally among the participating churches.

SAFETY FIRST

Harrisburg.—The first fine Spring days have brought the usual heavy toll of highway accidents and the Pennsylvania Motor Federation is out with a renewal appeal to pedestrians, in the interest of their own safety, to walk on the left hand side of highways, facing the motor vehicle traffic.

Secretaries of some of the 62 clubs comprising the Federation have written asking that signs be placed, especially in the vicinity of schools and churches in rural districts, advising people to walk on the left of the road. Secretary Paul D. Wright of the Department of Highways, who has already endorsed the idea, has been asked by the Federation to cooperate in some way to inculcate the habit among pedestrians. All officials familiar with highway accidents, agree that this plan will prevent many serious injuries and deaths.

CLEAN UP WEEK BEGINS APRIL 15

April 9, 1924.

To the Readers of the Gazette:

"Clean up Week" begins April 14th and is followed by "Forest Protection Week". These two are inseparable. Tuesday of "Clean up Week" is "Forestry Day" when particular attention should be paid to cleaning away dead growth and underbrush, to the opening of old woods roads for fire breaks, and to the cleaning of safety strips along railroads and highways in the forests.

Every effort should be put forth to make it more difficult for fires to start in the woods or to burn large areas if they do start.

As a sportsman, hunter or fisherman, interested in wild life and the woods; as a lumber user dependent on forest products for the necessities and comforts of life; as a citizen interested in the prosperity of this Commonwealth which depends on wooded hills, pure and constant water supply, and the health and happiness of those laboring within its confines, you must be concerned with the forest fire problem.

Fire continues to be the greatest single agency of forest destruction, and human carelessness to be the chief cause of all forest fires. No single agency of forest destruction, in sentiment combined with public cooperation in combating it.

Forest fires destroy valuable property and sometimes human life. Every forest fire, no matter how small, is a possible calamity. The unintentional setting of a forest fire is criminal negligence.

It is not alone on account of replacing the forest removed by lumbering that April 11th and 25th of this year have been set aside by the Governor as Arbor Days when trees should be planted, but also on account of the area laid bare as a result of the destruction of the woods by fire for twice the area of woodland burns each year as is cut over with the axe and saw.

Be careful with fire in the woods—be sure your match, tobacco or camp fire is out. Don't burn brush near the woods on dry windy days. Be as careful with fire while you are in the woods as you are in your own home.

Sincerely yours,

George H. Wirt,

Chief Forest Fire Warden.

LAST NUMBER OF LYCEUM COURSE TO-NIGHT

"Clarence L. Bergdurfier"

Clarence L. Bergdurfier, Entertainer, "Apostle of Fun". A master story teller, costumed Impersonator and Character Delineator is a head liner on Lyceum programs. He is a man of clean thought, kindly sympathetic nature, geniality and optimism, whose innate good humor is contagious, his sparkling wit bubbling out spontaneously together with a long and rich experience among "folks" in the Lyceum has made him a bright spot on any program, and the "king" of the successful platform humorists. He is delightfully original, embarking upon the unusual in wit and style, making the entire program a wonderful mixture of mirth, joy and sadness, laughter and tears, running the gamut of the grotesque to impressive oratory, carrying his audience whither he will. He is commonly known as "The man with the smile worthwhile".

This is the last number of the Lyceum course.

FIRE

Two fires occurred in our town this week. On Monday afternoon at about 2:30 o'clock the fire alarm was sounded and it was found that the fire was at the office of Simon H. Sell, Attorney of this place. The fire originated from the furnace in the basement directly under the office, setting fire to some lumber, which was stored in the rafters of the cellar. The office furniture was moved to the pavement, but was soon taken in again, as very little damage was done to the office, the smoke causing more damage and excitement than the fire itself. The Fire Department was called and soon both fire and smoke disappeared.

Practical Suggestions for Producers of Beef

N. K. Carnes of the animal husbandry division of the University of Minnesota offers several suggestions to producers of beef as to how to improve their position in these times of narrow margins and high taxes. He says beef producers can get larger returns by:

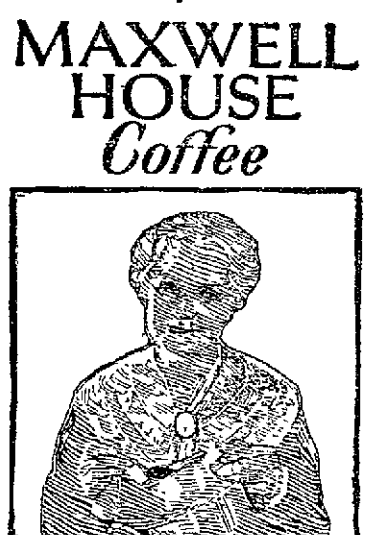

Producing what the market demands. Marketing through co-operative associations.

Investing the minimum of capital only in buildings and equipment. Keeping good typed animals rather than scrubs.

Providing good pasture, and Feeding comparatively inexpensive rations during the winter.

Mr. Carnes lays emphasis on feeding and type. "Good cattle command a premium on our live stock markets," he says. "Good typed animals do not consume less feed than the scrub, but they make more economical use of it. The bureau of animal industry maintains that a steak from a high-class beef animal contains 40 per cent more food value than does a steak from a scrub."

Mr. Carnes holds that feeds for wintering the breeding herd need not be expensive. Silage supplemented with dry roughage and some protein concentrate will carry beef animals along economically. If the dry roughage consists of a legume hay the protein concentrate can be omitted from the ration. "Under some conditions," he says, "it might be more economical to sell part of the legume hay and substitute for it the cheaper roughages with some highly concentrated protein feed. Relative prices should determine."

WHAT MY NEIGHBOR SAYS

Is of Interest to Bedford Folks.

When one has had the misfortune to suffer from backache, headaches, dizziness, urinary disorders and other kidney ills—and has found relief from all this sickness and suffering, that person's advice is of untold value to friends and neighbors. The following case is only one of many thousands, but it is that of a Bedford resident. Who could ask for a better example?

Miss Mary Wise, 147 Spring St., says: "I had a steady, heavy pain in my back and when I stooped, I was taken with sharp, stabbing pains. I became dizzy and dark specks appeared before me. Mornings when I got out of bed, my muscles ached and I had a tired-out feeling. My kidneys were weak and didn't act regularly. I got a box of Doan's Pills at Heckerman's Drug Store. Before I had used all of it, I was cured and have had no occasion to use Doan's since."

Miss Wise is only one of many Bedford people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for DOAN'S PILLS, the same that Miss Wise had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50 cents at all dealers. ## WOLFSBURG

Mrs. Mary J. Diehl was the guest of her daughter Mrs. Fred Claar of Bedford, last Friday.

Mr. Charles Williamson and little son James and Miss Mary Berkheimer left on last Sabbath morning for several days visit to relatives in Pittsburgh and Carnegie.

Mr. George C. Moore from across the hills was greeting old time friends in Wolfsburg last Sabbath.

Harry W. Diehl the young man with the golden smile is now occupying part of the Dr. Wolfe farmhouse.

April the first brought quite a number of changes in the community.

Mr. W. E. Souser moved from Braddock into his home which he purchased a number of years ago.

Mr. William Hoagland of Bedford, Rt. 5 is now occupying the house which he purchased some time ago from Mr. L. M. Dibert and Mr. George Hoagland.

Mr. Joseph Budesky who had been employed at the county home for a number of years moved on last Friday into the house of Dr. A. C. Wolfe on Railroad Street.

Mr. S. R. Smith a veteran of the Civil War and one of the brave boys who dawned the union blue, on April 4th, celebrated the eighty-fourth anniversary of his birth. Mr. Smith has been confined to his home for a number of years, he having suffered a slight stroke of the limbs. Despite his advanced age and physical condition his memory is as clear as a young man with the glow of youth on his cheek, and in the early morning of his life, he can entertain you with the reminiscences of days long gone by, he is certainly a very pleasant companion to converse with. Mr. Smith is now in the twilight hour of his life and we trust that the evening shadows will lengthen into many years of rich content.

On last Friday we felt the first kiss of spring. The soft warm winds came up from off the sun-kissed south. We trust that this welcome guest will remain with us as the lady in black informs us that she will return in time to hear the wedding bells ring in this vicinity. (Take your guess.)

On Monday night a very excellent program was rendered by the Parent-Teacher Association at the Osterburg school. The meeting was well-attended and every one on the program responded with parts well-prepared. A surprise was sprung when 4 robed and masked women of the Ku Klux Klan entered the room and presented the school with a donation of $20 and a most beautiful letter of greeting commending the teachers, school and the Association for their splendid work, and everyone gave their ears of attention to a brief and impressive explanation of the principles of the organization. The letter was read by the chairman of the Association, Rev. John A. Borger, who thanked the women for this splendid gift and message. The donation is to be applied to the fund for the new piano which is now almost liquidated. The Principal of the school Mr. E. E. Blackburn was marooned on his way from Fishertown to the meeting in the mud and had not arrived at the time of this visit. The donation and letter were handed to him when he arrived, accepted it, and expressed of the community in various ways for the success of the Osterburg School. The next meeting will be held the first Monday night in May which will be the last one for this school year.

Sound Value Marks Both
Old and New Buicks

Years of Hard Service Reveal Sturdy Construction of all Models

The durability of Buicks is most forcibly demonstrated by the thousands of models of past years that are still giving faithful service to their owners in all parts of the country. Although these cars were built at different times and reveal the improvements in construction and design that Buick is constantly making, they are all alike so far as basic qualities are concerned.

They are all built on such sound principles and with such thorough workmanship that they meet the test of time with great credit. That is why the Buick owner has little trouble in selling his car when he wishes to purchase a newer model. And he buys a new model with confidence because he knows he will find in it the same durability and dependability as in his previous car, plus the many features of convenience and comfort that Buick is constantly developing.

I desire through the columns of this paper to sincerely thank the members of the Bedford Fire Company and all others who aided in saving my Law Office Building from destruction by fire on April 7th.

SCHOOL~

The little crossroads schoolhouse held only a score of pupils. In case of fire, exit was easy for all.

Today our schools literally turn away pupils, often working many classes in morning and afternoon shifts. Despite constant fire drills we frequently have appalling disasters from such crowded buildings. Suppose one of the victims was your child.

A school building of concrete being fireproof is not only safe for children, but also safe for the taxpayer's money—for it is permanent. And in first cost it is but 6% more than one of impermanent materials. Ask your building material dealer to demonstrate to you what is true building economy. He knows.

more heinous than sheep-stealing, was flung into jail and subjected to the further indignity of being audibly described as a fit subject for the whipping post, an institution that still prevailed despite a general movement to abolish it throughout the state.

It galled him to hear the fuss that was being made over Moll. Everybody seemed to be taking her part. Why, that Gwyn woman not only went so far as to say she would be responsible for Moll's appearance in court, but actually arranged to buy her a lot of new clothes. And the sheriff patted her on the shoulder and loudly declared that the only thing any judge or jury could possibly find her guilty of was criminal negligence in only half-doing the job. This was supplemented by a look that left no doubt in Martin's mind as to just what he considered to be the neglected part of the job.

He bethought himself of the one powerful friend he had in town—Barry Lapelle. So he sent this message by word of mouth to the suspected dandy:

"I'm in jail. I want you to come and see me right off. I mean business."

Needless to say, this message, conveying a far from subtle threat, was a long time in reaching Mr. Lapelle, who had gone into temporary retirement at Jack Trentman's shanty, having arrived at that unsavory retreat by a roundabout, circuitous route which allowed him to spend some time on the bank of a sequestered brook.

Meanwhile Rachel Carter approached her own home, afoot and weary. As she turned the bend she was surprised and not a little disturbed by the sight of Kenneth Gwynne standing at her front gate. He hurried up the road to meet her.

"The worst has come to pass," he announced, stopping in front of her. "Before you go in I must tell you just what happened here this morning. Come in here among the trees where we can't be seen from the house."

She listened impassively to his story. Only the expression in her steady, unswerving eyes betrayed her inward concern and agitation. Not once did she interrupt him. Her shoulders, he observed, drooped a little and her arm hung limply at her side, mute evidence of a sinking heart and the resignation that comes with defeat.

"I am ready and willing," he assured her at the end, "to do anything, to say anything you wish. It is possible for us to convince her that there is no truth in what he said. We can lie—"

She held up her hand, shaking her head almost angrily. "No! Not that, Kenneth. I cannot permit you to lie for me. That would be unspeakable. I am not abiding without honor. There is nothing you can do for her—either of us at present. Thank you for preparing me—and for your offer, Kenneth. Stay away from us until you have had time to think it all over. Then you will realize that this generous impulse of yours would do more harm than good. Let her think what she will of me, she must not lose her faith in you, my boy."

"But—what of her?" he expostulated. "What are you going to say to her when she asks you—"

"I don't know," she interrupted, listlessly. "I am not a good liar, Kenneth Gwynne. Whatever else you may say or think of me, I—I have never wilfully lied."

She started away, but after a few steps turned back to him. "Jasper Suggs is dead. Moll Hawk killed him last night. She has been arrested. There is nothing you can do for Viola at present, but you may be able to help that poor, unfortunate girl. Suggs told her about me. She will keep the secret. Go and see the sheriff at once. He will tell you all that has happened."

Then she strode off without another word. He watched the tall, black figure until it turned in at the gate and was lost to view, a sort of stupefaction gripping him. Presently he aroused himself and walked slowly homeward. As he passed through his own gate he looked over at the windows of the room in which Viola had sought seclusion. The curtains hung limp and motionless. He wondered what was taking place inside the four walls of that room.

Out of the maze into which his thoughts had been plunged by the swift procession of events groped the new and disturbing turn in the affairs of Rachel Carter. What was back of the untold story of the slaying of Jasper Suggs? What were the circumstances? Why had Moll Hawk killed the man? Had Rachel Carter figured directly or indirectly in the tragedy? He recalled her significant allusion to Isaac Stain the night before and his own rather startling inference—and now she was asking him to help Moll Hawk in her hour of tribulation. A cold perspiration started out all over him. The question persisted: What was back of the slaying of Jasper Suggs?

He gave explicit and peremptory directions to Zachariah in case Mrs. Gwyn asked for him, and then set out briskly for the courthouse.

By this time the news of the murder had spread over the town. A crowd had gathered in front of Scudder's undertaking establishment. Knots of men and women, disregarding traffic, stood in the streets adjoining the public square, listening to some qualified narrator's account of the night's expedition and the tragedy at Martin Hawk's.

Kenneth hurried past these crowds and made his way straight to the office of the sheriff. Farther down the street a group of people stood in front of the sheriff's house, while in the vicinity of the little jail an ever-increasing mob was collecting.

A friend espied him. "I've been over to your office twice, young man," he announced as he came up. "Where the devil have you been keepin' yourself? Mrs. Gwyn left word for you to come right up to her house. She wants you to take charge of the Hawk girl's case. Maybe you don't know it, but you've been engaged to defend her."

Kenneth accompanied the sheriff to the latter's home for an interview with his client. He had promptly consented to act as her counsel after hearing the story of the crime from the sheriff.

After considerable persuasion on the part of the sheriff and his kindly wife, Moll repeated her story to Gwynne. She was abashed before this elegant young man. A shyness and confusion that had been totally lacking in her manner toward the other and older men took possession of her now, and it was with difficulty that she was induced to give him the complete details of all that took place in her father's cabin.

When he shook hands with her as he was about to take his departure, she suddenly found courage to say:

"Kin I see you alone fer a couple of minutes, Mr. Gwynne?"

"Certainly, Miss Hawk," he replied, gravely courteous. "I am sure Mr. and Mrs.—"

"Come right in the sitting room, Mr. Gwynne," interrupted the housewife, bustling over to open the door.

Moll stared blankly at her counsel. No one had ever called her Miss Hawk before. She was not quite sure that she had heard aright. Could it be possible that this grand young gentleman had called her Miss Hawk? Still wondering, she followed him out of the kitchen, sublimely unconscious of the ridiculous figure she cut in the garments of the older woman.

"Shut the door," she said, as her keen, wood-wary eyes swept the room. She crossed swiftly to the window and looked out. Her lips curled a little. "Most of them people has been standin' out yonder sence nine o'clock, tryin' to see what sort of lookin' animal I am, Mr. Gwynne. Hain't nobody got any work to do?"

"Vulgar curiosity, nothing more," said he, joining her at the window.

"Tain't ever day they get a chance to see a murderer, is it?" she said, lowering her head suddenly and putting a hand to her quivering chin. For the first time she seemed on the point of breaking down.

He made haste to exclaim, "You are not a murderer. You must not think or say such things, Miss Hawk."

She kept her head down. A scarlet wave crept over her face. "I—I wish you wouldn't call me that, Mr. Gwynne. Hit—hit makes me feel kind o'—kind o' lonesome-like. Jest as ef I didn't have no friends. Call me Moll. That's all I am."

He studied for a moment the half-averted face of this girl of the forest. He could not help contrasting it with the clear-cut, delicate, beautifully modeled face of another girl of the dark frontier—Viola Gwyn. And out of this swift estimate grew a new pity for poor Moll Hawk, the pity one feels for the vanquished.

"You will be surprised to find how many friends you have, Moll," he said gently.

There was no indication that she was impressed one way or the other by this remark. She drew back from the window and faced him, her eyes keen and searching.

"Do you reckon anybody is listenin'?" she asked.

"I think not—in fact, I am sure we are quite alone."

"Well, this is somethin' I don't keer to have the sheriff know, or anybody else, Mr. Gwynne. Hiss about Mr. Lapelle."

"Yes?" he said, as she paused warily.

"Mrs. Gwynne she told me this mornin' that whatever I said to my lawyer would be sacred an' wouldn't ever be let out to anybody, no matter what it wuz. She said it wuz against the code of somethin'. Wuz she right?"

"In a sense, yes. Of course, you must understand, Moll, that no honest lawyer will obligate himself to shield a criminal or a fugitive from justice, or—I may as well say to you now that if you expect that of me I must warn you not to tell me anything. You would force me to withdraw as your counsel."

"I wuz only thinkin' mebbey you could see your way to do somethin' I wuz goin' to ask. I jest wanted to git word to Mr. Lapelle."

"Mr. Lapelle and I are not friends, Moll."

"Is it beca'se of what I asked Ike Stain to tell ye?"

"Partly."

"I mean about stealin' Miss Viola Gwyn an' takin' her away with him?"

"I want to thank you, Moll, for sendin' me the warning. It was splendid of you."

"Oh, I didn't do it beca'se—" she began, somewhat defiantly, and then closed her lips tightly. The sullen look came back into her eyes.

"I understand. You—you like him yourself."

"Well—what ef I do?" she burst out. "Hit's my look-out, ain't it?"

"Certainly. I am not blaming you."

"I guess there ain't no use talkin' any more," she said flatly. "You wouldn't do what I want ye to do anyhow, so what's the sense of askin' you. We better go back to the kitchen."

"It may console you to hear that I have already told Mr. Lapelle that he must get out of this town before tomorrow morning," said he deliberately. "And stay out."

She leaned forward, her face brightening. "You told him to git away to-night?" she half-whispered, eagerly. "I thought you said you wuzn't a friend o' his'n."

"That is what I said."

"Then, what did you warn him to git away fer?"

He was thinking rapidly. "I did it on account of Miss Gwyn, Moll," he replied, evasively.

"Well—What Ef I Do?"

"Do you think he'll go?" she asked, a fierce note of anxiety in her voice.

"That remains to be seen." Then he hazarded: "I think he will when he finds out that your father has been arrested."

"He's been a good friend to me, Mr. Gwynne, Mr. Lapelle has," said she, a little huskily. She waited a moment and then went on earnestly and with a garrulosity that amazed him: "I don't keer what he's done that ain't right, or what people is goin' to say about him, he's allus been nice to me. I guess mebbey you air a wonderin' why I tole Ike Stain about him figgerin' on carryin' Miss Gwyn away. That don't look very friendly, I guess. Hit wuzn't beca'se I thought I might git him fer myself some time—no, hit wuzn't that, Mr. Gwynne. I ain't setch a fool as to think he could ever want to be sparkin' me. I reckon Ike Stain tole ye I wuz jealous. Well, I wuzn't. I declare to goodness I wuzn't. Hit wuz beca'se I jest couldn't low her to git married to him, knowin' what I do. I wuz tryin' to make up my mind to go see her some time an' tell her not to marry him, but I jest couldn't seem to git the spunk to do it. She used to come to see me when I wuz sick last winter an' she wuz mighty nice to me."

"First thing I know, him an' Pap begin to fix up this plan to carry her off. So I started up to town to tell her. I got as far as Ike's when I figgered I better let him do it, him bein' a man, so I drapped in at his cabin an' tole him. I didn't know what else to do. I had to stop 'em from doin' it somehow. Hit wouldn't do no good fer me to beg Pap to drap it, or to rare up on my hind-legs an' make threats against 'em, 'ca'se they'd soon put a stop to that. Course I had it all figgered out what I wuz goin' to do when they pack o' rascals got caught tryin' to steal her—some of 'em shot, like as not—and I didn't much keer whether my Pap wuz one of 'em or not."

"I knowed where Mr. Lapelle wuz to meet 'em down the river across from Le Grange, so I was figgerin' on findin' him there an' tellin' him what had happened an' fer him to make his escape down the river while he had setch a good start. I wuzn't goin' to let anything happen to Miss Viola Gwyn ef I could help it. I—I sort of figgered it out as a good way to help both o' my friends, Mr. Gwynne, an'—an' then this here thing happened, I want Mr. Lapelle to git away safe—ca'se I know what Pap's goin' to do. He's goin' to blat out a lot o' things. He says he's sure Mr. Lapelle put Mrs. Gwyn up to havin' him arrested."

"I think you may rest easy, Moll," said he, a trifle grimly. "Mr. Lapelle had an engagement with me for tomorrow morning, but I'll stake my life he will not be here to keep it."

"All right," she said, satisfied. "Ef you say so, Mr. Gwynne, I'll believe it. What do you think they'll do to Pap?"

"He will probably get a dose of the whipping-post, for one thing."

She grinned. "Gosh, I wish I could be some-eres about so's I could see it," she cried.

CHAPTER XIX

Challenge and Retort.

Kenneth could hardly contain himself until the time came for him to go home for his noonday meal. Try as he would, he could not divorce his thoughts from the trouble that had come to Viola. The sinister tragedy in Martin Hawk's cabin was as nothing compared to the calamity that had befallen the girl he loved, for Moll Hawk's troubles would pass like a whiff of the wind, while Viola's would endure to the end of time—always a shadow hanging over her brightest day, a cloud that would not vanish. Out of the silence had come a murmur more desolating than the thunderbolt with all its bombastic fury; out of the silence had come a voice that would go on forever whispering into her ear an unlovely story.

A crowd still hung about the jail and small, ever-shifting groups held sober discourse in front of business places. He hurried by them and struck off up the road, his mind so intent upon what lay ahead of him that he failed to notice that Jack Trentman had detached himself from the group in front of the undertaker's and was following swiftly after him. He was nearly half-way home when he turned, in response to a call from behind, and beheld the gambler.

"I'd like a word with you, Mr. Gwynne," drawled Jack.

"I am in somewhat of a hurry, Mr. —"

"I'll walk along with you, if you don't mind," said the other, coming up beside him. "I'm not in the habit of beating about the bush. When I've got anything to do, I do it without much fiddling. Barry Lapelle is down at my place. He has asked me to represent him in a little controversy that seems to call for physical adjudication. How will day after tomorrow at five in the morning suit you?"

"Perfectly," replied Kenneth, stiffly. "Convey my compliments to Mr. Lapelle and say to him that I overlook the irregularity and will be glad to meet him at any time and any place."

"I know it's irregular," admitted Mr. Trentman, with an apologetic wave of the hand, "but he was in some doubt as to who might have the honor to act for you, Mr. Gwynne, so he suggested that I come to you direct. If you will oblige me with the name of the friend who is to act as your second, I will make a point of apologizing for having accosted you in this manner, and also perfect the details with him."

"I haven't given the matter a moment's thought," said Kenneth, frowning. "Day after tomorrow morning, you say?"

"Yes, sir."

"Can't you arrange it for tomorrow morning?"

Mr. Trentman spread out his hands in a deprecatory manner. "In view of the fact that you are expected to appear in court at nine tomorrow morning to defend an unfortunate girl, Mr. Lapelle feels that he would be doing your client a very grave injustice if he killed her lawyer—er—a trifle prematurely, you might say. He has confided to me that he is the young woman's friend and can't bear the thought of having her chances jeopardized by—"

"Pardon me, Mr. Trentman," interrupted Kenneth shortly. "Both of you are uncommonly thoughtful and considerate. Now that I am reminded of my pleasant little encounter with Mr. Lapelle this morning, I am constrained to remark that I have had all the satisfaction I desire. You may say to him that I am a gentleman and not in the habit of fighting duels with horse-thieves."

Mr. Trentman started. His vaunted aplomb sustained a sharp spasm that left him with a slightly fallen jaw.

"Am I to understand, sir, that you are referring to my friend as a horse thief?" he demanded, bristling.

"I merely asked you to take that message to him," said Kenneth coolly. "I might add cattle thief, sheep stealer, hog thief or—"

"Why, good G—d, sir," gasped Trentman, "he'd shot you down like a dog if I—"

"You might also tell Mr. Lapelle that his bosom friend Martin Hawk is in jail."

"Well, what of it?"

"Does Lapelle know that Martin is in jail?"

"Certainly—and he says he ought to be hung. That's what he thinks of Hawk. A man that would sell his own—"

"Hawk is in jail for stockstealing, Mr. Trentman."

"What's that got to do with the case? What's that got to do with your calling my friend a horse thief?"

"A whole lot, sir. You will probably find out before the day is over that you are harboring and concealing a thief down there in your shanty, and you may thank Martin Hawk for the information in case you prefer not to accept the word of a gentleman. If you were to come to me as a client seeking counsel, I should not hesitate

Sanitary Concrete on the Dairy Farm

Concrete is the dairy farmer's most desirable building material. Barn floors and foundations, milk houses, cooling tanks and other necessary equipment of verminproof, easily-cleaned Concrete invite confidence and bring buyers. They are next to good stock as a dairy farm attraction. Their cost is small when the many advantages of Concrete are fairly considered. Their upkeep cost is practically nothing because Concrete never rots, rusts, burns or needs expensive repairs. It is as everlasting as solid stone.

Rates and Returns

The millions of dollars' worth of telephone property in Pennsylvania represent investment savings of the people of Pennsylvania. A hundred and twenty-five thousand such investors live in this State.

In putting their money into the telephone business they had faith that the people of Pennsylvania would pay reasonable rates for good telephone service.

As the telephone business expands it is necessary to go to this same public and ask them to invest additional funds. We can secure that money only so long as rates for telephone service are such as to allow an adequate return on the money invested.

The present rates do not so allow.

That's why we are asking the very same public at this time for a moderate increase.

In other words, we are asking "of the public, for the public."

WEEKLY HEALTH TALK

The health talk of the Pennsylvania Department of Health is prepared this week by Dr. C. J. Hollister, Chief, Dental Hygiene Division. Dr. Hollister says:

"Many diseases, such as rheumatism, heart trouble, etc., are caused by bad teeth. Tooth decay is the most prevalent of all diseases—about ninety percent of the human race suffering from it. Eighty percent of tooth decay can be prevented by proper and regular home care of the mouth and teeth, supplemented by periodic examination and treatment by a dentist.

"The mouth is the vestibule of the body, and is well named—'The gateway to health'. All nourishment taken into the body passes through the mouth, and most diseases get in the same way. Give your teeth the same attention the housewife gives to tableware each time after using, and visit your dentist twice a year for examination and necessary treatment and you will have insurance against future discomfort, disfigurement and sickness.

To brush the teeth, use a medium stiff brush with bristles set far apart and a good dentifrice, either cream or powder. Take the advice of your regular dentist as to the method of brushing to be used. A stitch in time saves nine applies to teeth as well as torn garments. A person never misses his teeth until they are gone. False teeth are like crutches to help a lame man walk. KEEP YOUR OWN."

Yes, but Why Tell Us About It?

THE PART THE PRESIDENT IS PLAYING

By Lynn Haines

The great calamity has come. Monstrous political perversions and gigantic grafts, the deadliest enemies of a Republic, have shaken the very foundations of faith in the public life of the nation. Its government stands discredited. Its institutions are in danger.

Such a crisis demands straight thinking and plain speaking.

The major responsibility should be placed where it belongs—upon the President. It was his opportunity, and within his power, to avert the catastrophe of undermined confidence. He could have accomplished this by ousting each and every official who has been guilty of negligence or graft, and placing in their positions Cabinet heads of unquestioned, unconquerable, disinterested honesty. It would have stayed the storm of popular suspicion and distrust had there been quick, determined, decisive executive action to bring about restitutions and punishments.

Instead of a courageous course of independent action, the President has made no single important move on his own initiative. He has not led, but followed, reluctantly, less than half-heartedly in dealing with the wholesale corruption and incompetency in high places.

He knew what was going on. To assume less is to impute an ignorance and indifference to public welfare, rendering him wholly unfit for the Presidency.

He presided over the Senate when the Teapot Dome scandal was first discussed. He sat with President Harding's Cabinet throughout the period of that "criminal" consummation. He must have followed the sickening revelations of the Walsh committee. Yet he did nothing until prompted and prodded by Senate resolutions.

The President presided over the Senate during the debate on the scandalous situation in the Shipping Board. He could not have been unmindful of the conditions there that cried aloud to Heaven for renovation.

The President must have known of the tremendous graft and political spoils in the affairs of the Alien Property Custodian, particularly in preceding administrations.

The President could not possibly have been ignorant of graft in the Veterans' Bureau. The astounding congressional disclosures made all that clear.

The President could not conceivably have been ignorant of the fact that Teapot Dome would look like thirty cents as compared with the whole war graft situation. He knew that here had never been an audit of war funds aggregating nearly forty billions. He knew that the attempt to get a complete investigation of the billions that were wantonly wasted or shamelessly stolen was thwarted by the grossest parliamentary malpractice in the last Congress.

Yet he was silent, inactive, unmoved by any apparent impulse to speed up justice in the most momentous and monumental thieveries of all history.

Both branches of Congress, by unanimous votes, passed a resolution declaring that the Teapot Dome transaction, in which Fall and Denby took leading parts, was "executed under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption."

That resolution further declared: "The said leases and contracts were entered into without authority on the part of the officers purporting to act in the execution of the same for the United States and in violation of the acts of Congress; and

"Such leases and contracts were made in defiance of the settled policy of the government . . . to maintain in the ground a great reserve supply of oil adequate to the needs of the Navy in any emergency threatening the national security."

Fall could not have done his part without the cooperation of Denby. So far as public interest and public welfare are concerned each is as guilty as the other.

Yet the President made no move to oust Denby as Secretary of the Navy.

Later, in the only way it could act in the matter, the Senate resolved:

"That it is the sense of the United States Senate that the President of the United States immediately request the resignation of Edwin Denby as Secretary of the Navy."

Still the President kept Denby. More than that he issued a defiant statement that:

"No official recognition can be given to the passage of the Senate resolution relative to their opinion concerning members of the Cabinet or other officers under Executive control."

When, finally, Denby did resign the President wrote:

"It is with regret that I am to part with you. You will go with the knowledge that your honesty and integrity have not been impugned."

Consider the case of Daugherty. The same Senate resolution that characterized the Teapot Dome transaction as "indicating fraud and corruption," contained these orders to the President:

Resolved further, That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed immediately to cause suit to be instituted and prosecuted for the annulment and cancellation of the said leases and contracts and all contracts incidental or supplement thereto, to enjoin further extraction of oil from the said services under said leases or from the territory covered by the same, to secure any further appropriate incidental relief, and to prosecute such other actions or proceedings, civil and criminal, as may be warranted by the facts in relation to the making of the said leases and contract.

And the President is further authorized and directed to appoint by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, special counsel who shall have charge and control of the prosecution of such litigation, anything in the statutes touching the powers of the Attorney General of the Department of Justice to the contrary notwithstanding.

In other words, the Senate said: "We do not and cannot trust your Attorney General. Therefore we instruct you to employ special counsel."

Already Daugherty had been discredited. Long before this a real President would have replaced him with a more acceptable official. Yet even when both branches voted their utter lack of confidence in him, Coolidge kept Daugherty. He should have said to the Senate: "Don't pass that resolution. It will not be necessary. The task of making public prosecutions and securing justice to the people rightfully, logically, is the function of the Attorney General. I will at once provide a new Attorney General, a man worthy of your confidence and that of the country. Further I will see that he has competent, trustworthy assistants." Instead of doing that, even then the President made no move to oust Daugherty.

Ignoring the plain imputation of this congressional action that his Attorney General could not be trusted to deal with big graft, he kept Daugherty and uncomplainingly complied with the order to employ special counsel to do what the Department of Justice was paid for and expected to perform.

What a sorry position for a President and his Attorney General!

Daugherty stayed on. He is still Attorney General as this is written, although his resignation is momentarily expected as a result of congressional and public clamor.

Why does the President keep Daugherty? His office is crucially vital to the "safety" of the exploiters and grafters. Is he retained in that position because of their need for protection?

Is it because the appointment of a "safe" Attorney General to succeed him would hardly be possible with the Senate and country stirred so deeply? The certain fight on the confirmation of a new Attorney General who would be "satisfactory" to the looters and profiteers—is that the real reason why Daugherty was not ditched?

A real President would have said to Daugherty:

"Congress and the country look upon you with suspicion. Whether justly or not they have lost confidence in you. The time has come for great, far-reaching prosecutions, which involve vastly more than reparations and punishments. These cases must be so conducted as to restore popular faith in the integrity, ability and power of the Government. You cannot meet the requirements. Get out."

Then the President should have placed a clean, competent, fearless prosecuting attorney in charge of the Department of Justice. He should have instructed such an official, not only to act in the Teapot Dome matter, but also in scores and scores of other "grafts." In the end, with a real President and a fighting Department of Justice it would have meant a "criminal drive" extending into all the gigantic thieveries of the war period.

But the President did nothing of that character. He is keeping Daugherty to the last minute that is possible.

A real President would have recognized that Fall, Denby and Daugherty were no worse, politically, than all the rest of the Cabinet. He would have said to the country: "There has been quite enough of special interest favors. It is high time to give the people a square deal. This political thing called reactionism means only that the profiteers and exploiters of one kind and another get every advantage that those in control of the government, directly and indirectly, can bestow. I will wipe the slate clean and give the country a completely new Cabinet, superseding the present corps of politicians with statesmen, whose hearts and hands are free of selfishness and subversivity."

The President did not do that. He kept them all. With a consistency worthy a better cause, he stuck to the worst of them.

Most conspicuous of all the things that the President has done is his announcement of candidacy for election in 1924.

Despite such a clear record of loyalty to executive associates whom Congress and the country believe to be, if not unfaithful at least incompetent stewards of public welfare; despite his own incapacity or lack of courage to deal adequately with any important phase of the crisis that confronts the nation, Coolidge asks and perhaps expects, the approval of the electors of America.

What fools, what plain damn fools! the people must be in the opinion of the Old Guard!

Lesson for April 13

ELIJAH AND THE STRUGGLE WITH BAAL

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 18:17-46.
GOLDEN TEXT—"No man can serve two masters."—Matt. 6:24.
PRIMER TOPIC—God Hears Elijah's Prayer.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Elijah on Mt. Carmel.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Conflict between Jezebel and Elijah.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Elijah Won the Victory.

I. Elijah's Message to Ahab (vv. 17-18).

When Jezebel became the wife of King Ahab, she waged a savage warfare against God's prophets, killing all she could find, thus seeking to abolish the true religion and set up idolatry instead. Elijah suddenly appeared, announcing the suspension of moisture (I Kings 17:1) as a judgment upon the people for their idolatry. He sounded three striking notes in his message:

(1) "As the Lord God of Israel liveth"—He knew that he represented the living God, therefore did not fear.

(2) "Before whom I stand"—Because Elijah stood before God, he could stand before Ahab.

(3) "There shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word."—Drought was the punishment for idolatry (Deut. 11:16, 17).

II. A Challenge to Baal Worship (I Kings 18:17-46).

As soon as Elijah had delivered his message concerning the drought, he retired from the king's sight, while the penalty of the king's sins should be visited upon the land.

1. Elijah Shows Himself to Ahab (vv. 17, 18).

(1) Ahab's question (v. 17). His aim in this question was no doubt to intimidate Elijah, to awe him into submission. The devil goes about as a roaring lion (I Pet. 5:8).

(2) Elijah's answer (v. 18). He denied the charge and boldly declared that the calamity which had befallen the nation was caused by the idolatry of Ahab and his family.

2. The Bold Challenge (vv. 19-24).

(1) The people assemble (vv. 19, 20). At the urgent request of Elijah the king convened the people.

(2) The ringing call to decision (vv. 21-24).

a. The question asked (v. 21). Many of the people had not wholly forsaken God. They attempted to worship both God and Baal.

b. The silence of the people (v. 21). This may have been because of fear of the king, or ignorance, for many were of the opinion that to be religious was the only thing necessary, irrespective of the being worshipped.

c. The method of decision (vv. 22-24). Two sacrifices were to be provided, one to be offered to Baal, the other to God. The one who answered by fire was to be the God.

3. The Test Applied (vv. 25-39).

(1) Offering by the prophets of Baal (vv. 26-29). Elijah gave the prophets of Baal the first opportunity to prove to the people as to whether Baal was a real god.

(2) The offering by Elijah (v. 30-39).

a. People invited near (v. 30). There are no secrets in God's worship.

b. The altar repaired (vv. 30-32). Elijah took twelve stones representing the united nation.

c. The offering on the altar (vv. 33-35). After the bullock was in place he had four barrels of water three times emptied upon the sacrifice and the wood so as to fill the trench about the altar.

d. Elijah's prayer (vv. 36, 37). This was a model prayer.

(a) It was based upon covenants (v. 36). All real prayer rests upon covenant relationships.

(b) Its object was God's exaltation (v. 36). Elijah was jealous for God's glory, but the only thing that he asked for himself was to be known as God's servant.

(c) It was for the salvation of the people (v. 37). His heart yearned after Israel. He wanted them to come to know God.

e. The result (vv. 38, 39).

(a) The fire of the Lord fell and consumed, not only the sacrifice, but the wood, stones and dust, even licking up the water in the trenches.

(b) The people fell on their faces and confessed that the Lord was the God.

4. The Execution of Baal's Prophets (v. 40). Israel's government was a theocracy. God was their King. Idolatry was treason against the King.
